HOPES TO BREAK PATTEN CORNER

Gambling in Agricultural Products, Has a Remedy.

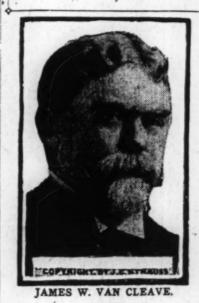

WASHINGTON .- Chairman Scott of the House committee on agriculture, who has introduced a bill to prevent gambling in futures on agricultural products, is engaged in an effort to break the wheat "corner." He has the idea that relief might be provided if a stock of wheat could be brought into the country to relieve the shortage.

Mr. Scott has induced the statistical bureaus of the government to look about for wheat stocks that might be available to relieve the pressure caused by the Patten "corner." Since the publication of the terms of his bill he has received scores of letters and telegrams of comendation. The message says:

The existing situation in regard to some of the great railroad companies which are serving the commonwealth of Massachusetts sems to me to be unsatisfactory. This stock may at any time change ownership and become the property of some great road whose main interest would not be in Massachusetts or in New England.

State Forester F. W. I am informed and believe that this result can be brought about if in the opinion of your honorable bodies it is considered wise.

I therefore propose that you consider he advisability of creating a corporation which, under such limitations as you prescribe, shall have the right to purchase and hold stock in the Boston & Maine railroad, giving to any railroad orporation incorporated under the laws of this commonwealth, if necessary, the power temporarily or otherwise to finance said corporation, and I would propose that if a charter is granted to such schooner and the anchor line of a bal- work. WASHINGTON-After a number of conferences, principally with western Republicans, Senator Cummins of Iowa today introduced an amendment to the tariff bill, providing for an income tax, which, he believes, will meet the constitutional objections raised by the supreme court against the law of 1894.

Mr. Cummins' amendment exempts incomes below $5000, and authorizes the deduction of that amount from every dutiable income. The rate provided for is on incomes not exceeding $10,000, 2 per cent; not exceeding $20,000, 21/2 per cent; $40,000, 3 per cent; $60,000, 31/2 per cent; $80,000, 4 per cent; $100,000, 5 per cent, and upon all incomes exceeding the latter amount, 6 per cent.

GREAT INCREASE IN PROSPERITY

Ceylon Makes Great Gain in Population Since Coming Under British Rule-Trade Grows in Importance.

LONDON-In a lecture delivered here, Mr. Ferguson, the proprietor and editor of the Ceylon Observer, said that the population had quadrupled since the whole island came under British sway less than a century ago, and another prosperous indication was the developnent of the general revenue, now close on £2,500,000 a year, or double what it was so recently as 1893.

But still more important was the increase in the total value of the island's trade, which now approximated from £18,000,000 to £20,000,000 per annum, or three times what it was after the offee failure some 20 years ago. There had been great progress in means of communication, but to meet the requirements of planting, especially of the new rubber industry, and of native agricultural progress in palms and rice, new roads and bridges were required and should be supplied.

Neither the Royal and Ancient Club or the U. S. G. A. has tried to stamp out this bad practise, which has grown almost intolerable. They simply recommend that players do not concede putts to their opponests. The Western Golf Association in its first attempt at independent rule making showed its ability to draft a short but emphatic rule that admits of but one interpretation. The player who concedes a putt to his op-

Under the arrangement which the war office hears has been effected, a committee of Young Turks will be the real rulers of the country and will so control affairs that a reactionary movement, similar to that responsible for the present uprising, will be impossible in the future.

Two things are said finally to have decided the Young Turks not to force the Sultan's abdication; inability to prove conclusively that Abdul Hamil was responsible for the recent mutiny, and reneration for the Moslem faith, which prohibits the deposition of a Sultan on any ground except that of insanity.

It is conceded that the Young Turks are in a position to enforce extreme demands and their toleration in the present crisis is declared here to be the greatest evidence of statesmanship that has ever been shown by the Mohammedan race.

As proof, however, that London is not satisfied that the safety of the Sultan is assured, underwriters here today raised the price of insurance on his life to 20 per cent for six months.

San Francisco Folk Are Striving to Outdo Each Other in Point of Beauty in Rebuilding the City

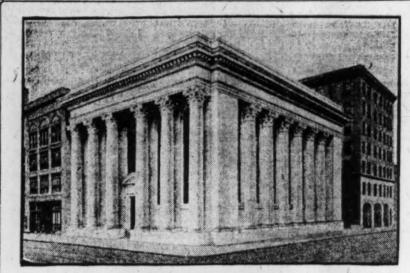

Three Years After the Earthquake and Fire Finds the People Full of Enthusiasm for Better Things.

GOOD WORK GOES ON

SAN FRANCISCO-Visitors to this sity invariably comment upon its remarkable growth since the earthquake and fire of three years ago. Only a resident, by contrast, can appreciate the improvement in the style of building. There has been a wonderful awakening to what good architecture and really fine building are. This makes an optimist rejoice that there were "cleansing fires," "thy dross to consume and thy gold to refine." These buildings are an encouragement to the people of the city and to others and are the best evidence possible of civic faith and

Too much for a cat? Bless you! This isn't a full-grown zoological cat. The CENTURY DICTIONARY defines Kitty thus: "Kitty-A pool into which each player in a card game puts a certain amount of his winnings to be used in meeting expenses, as for room rent, refreshments, etc."

NOW SEE: Frederick Upham Adams in the May Everybody's writing about "THE COST OF THE WALL STREET GAME." Mr. Adams, in clear, cold facts, proves to the would-be margin gambler just how investment, fixed charges, interest, and commissions eat up $180,000,000 every year before anybody on the outside wins. $180,000,000 for "room-rent, refreshments, etc.," as the Century Dictionary so quaintly puts it, before any little speculator at the other end of a telephone wire or rural free delivery route picks up a cent of profit.

There is a fine fight in this number. Do you care about a good scrap? It is a regular Kilkenny cat fight-Everybody's Publishers, a few Financial Periodicals, and Thomas W. Lawson in a general mixup. Mr. Lawson acknowledges receipt of a few bricks, and explains why people have lost money through following some of his advice. The few financial publications explain why Everybody's is entirely wrong.

> Does this WALL STREET talk bore you? Would you rather talk about the weather? Did your silk hat get caught out in the inauguration day snow-storm? Can you remember back to a bonnet, or best suit, that went up the spout because the paper said "Fair, clear, and colder" instead of telling you what was really going to happen? If you can, you will want to read "DOES THE WEATHER BUREAU MAKE GOOD?" by Emerson Hough. Mr. Hough can converse intelligently about the weather himself, but he doesn't always agree with the weather

> As a balance for the strenuous articles, there is some delicious foolery by JOSEPH LINCOLN, ELEANOR HOYT BRAIN-ERD, and ELLIS PARKER BUTLER; some beautiful drawings of SEATTLE and TACOMA, by VERNON HOWE BAILEY; a stirring ghost story by SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS; and something for music-lovers by JAMES HUNEKER. These are the salient points around which is built an unusually fine number, and a host of other good things fill up the chinks in the MAY.

The event was the largest about one-sixth as much as the average

> "An expenditure of $500,000,000 on the rivers, harbors and coastal waters of the United States would perfect a water transportation system of fully 25,000 miles, most of which is now so imperfect as to be of small value. This system could move enormous volumes of freight to and from nearly every part of the Union, and at such cheap rates that the saving in reduced freight charges would probably equal the totar cost every year.

"Congress should make prompt provision for improving all our worthy waterways, and the best method is by a bond issue of $50,000,000 a year for the next 10 years. Money spent wisely on waterways would be a permanent investment returning for all time a heavy interest in cheapened freights, and as posterity will reap the greatest part of the benefit it should help to pay the debt.

HOUSEHOLD NEEDS

Here's a Vacuum Cleaner that is different from any heretofore placed on the market.

It's built for hard service and is much easier to operate than any other. It has a stronger suction, is lighter in weight and requires less floor space than others. It is built of sheet and malleable iron instead of tin and wood as others are. It has a simple and most practical device for a parating the dust from the pure air (only one screen), 35 per cent of the dust is caught by our patented process without screens or water and with one simple-to-clean canvas. It

GETS ALL THE DUST

We realize that it is the "proof" that counts, therefore when you purchase one of these machines, if it is not all and more than we claim for it, after a week's trial return it and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

No flying dust, no taking up of carpets, but a simple, economical way of keeping your home thoroughly clean.

alities face to face." Now Christ Jesus said the kingdom of God is in your midst, and in saying that he certainly did not refer to the sick, and sinful, and sorrowing, to the hospitals, prisons and slums, to the storms and shipwrecks, the pestilences, wars and famines, which constitute so vast a part of what, physically speaking, we see in our midst. But as we accomplish every stage on our "passage from sense to Soul," as we begin to see through the glass less darkly, and to see instead the realities face to face, to see the creations of Spirit in place of the counterfeits of the material senses, we begin to understand how Isaiah could write: For the Lord hath comforted Zion; he hath comforted all her waste places, and hath made her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody."

The Turkish Crisis

THE INFLUENCE of Enver Bey, with the second army corps at Salonika, has turned the tide of the latest Turkish crisis, temporarily at any rate, against the Sultan, and rumors of the most reckless description are correspondingly prolific. It is better to say temporarily, for the astuteness of the Padischah is beyond question, and his position as commander of the faithful gives him a lever which may at any moment be applied to the political situation with startling effect. This accounts for the persistent rumors of the determination of the Young Turks to depose him, but a deposed Sultan, at liberty beyond the borders, might prove even more perplexing than an undeposed Sultan in the

The stories that he has offered the German government any terms to support him by force may be taken for exactly what it is worth. Even if it were true, it is not precisely a piece of information which the Sultan himself or the foreign office in Berlin would be confiding to the public. The truth is that probably not even the actors in the drama at Constantinople know where the present crisis will carry them. The redeeming feature of the deplorable condition at which things have arrived is that there seems to be a sincere effort at work to prevent the struggle degenerating into civil war. And the fact that in spite of all provocation that effort has so far been successful is the most extraordinary tribute to the self-restraint which has been developed by the nation even in the brief span of political liberty it has recently enjoyed.

THE PURPOSE which the signal corps of the United States army has in view in making an early start in its airship trials at Fort Myer this season is said to be that of practically demonstrating before members of Congress, called to the extra session, the necessity of appropriating sufficient money to enable the aeronautical division to make a beginning, at least, toward the establishment of an aerial navy. It is announced that as soon as a hydrogen gas generating plant is set up at Fort Myer the officers of the corps will begin the work of training their men in the balloon squad by making numerous flights in a new spherical balloon having a capacity of 35,000 cubic feet of gas and capable of carrying three persons. This bailoon is known as "Signal Corps No. 11." Flights will also be resumed in the only dirigible possessed by the

It is expected that the aeroplane trials will begin some time in May, or as soon as A. M. Herring and the Wrights shall deliver the machines which they have contracted to supply. A great deal of interest will center upon the Herring aeroplane, for the reason that, in partnership with Glenn H. Curtiss and the Wrights, Mr. Herring has patented a controlling device which is expected to revolutionize the efficiency and stability of the heavier-than-air machines, and it is believed that his contract machine at Fort Myer will have this

In-this connection it is said that the Herring-Curtiss aeroplane is not expected to offer any materially new features as to the carrying surface, being, it is understood, similar to the June Bug and other machines of the Aero Experiment Association. The motor, however, if successful, will be a marvel. This motor, which is expected to develop twenty-two horsepower, will weigh only twentyfive pounds. Two such motors will be used in the aeroplane intanded for the government. That one is to weigh approximately 200 pounds.

It is the hope of the signal corps officers that the members of Congress will be so impressed with the experiments at Fort Myer this season that they will be more inclined than heretofore to make liberal appropriations for this branch of the service at the regular session next winter. The argument that is made in behalf of the establishment of an aerial navy is practically the same as that advanced in defense of the maintenance of a powerful water navy-the more complete it is, and the more efficient, the less likely are we to be called upon to employ it in war.

The Wycliffe Bible

THE sale of a Wycliffe Bible in London for the sum of $6000 draws attention to the value placed upon the first English translations of the complete Scriptures. Earlier translations of course there had been of certain specific books. Such was the prose rendering of the Psalter by William of Shoreham, and such was Bede's famous translation of the Gospel of John. The translation of Wycliffe was the first attempt to do for the whole Bible what other men had done for parts, and it came at a critical moment in the political no less than in the religious evolution of the thought of the country. The Wycliffe translation has been described as not the mere issue of a new version of the Scriptures, but as an event, and an event it most certainly was. That Wycliffe, the master of Balliol, the evangelical doctor, the successor of Ockham, the idol of Oxford, itself the holder of the proud title of the second school of the church; the leader of the Oxford schoolmen in the very zenith of scholasticism, should be the man to deliver the blow by which the Vulgate, "the jewel of the church," was to be "turned into the common sport of the people," made him in the nature of a Daniel come to judgment. People today might be forgiven for not realizing that all Master Knighton meant by that extraordinarily strong language was that Wycliffe had given the common people the opportunity of reading the Bible in English instead of hearing it read in Latin, which was about as valuable to them as if it were read in Arabic in the churches today. "Whence," he goes on, "it is made vulgar by him, and more open to the reading of lay men and women than it usually is to the knowledge of lettered and intelligent clergy, and thus the pearl is cast abroad and trodden under feet of swine." Surely the criticism supplies a eulogy of Wycliffe which was quite unintended.

The ordinary man has very little suspicion how rare a possession a Wycliffe Bible is. There are, so far as is known, 170 of them in existence, and the fact that so many should have escaped the attention of Archbishop Arundel shows how greatly they must have been prized and the risks men must have been content to run to preserve them. The modern black letter and Roman letter reprints are not in the least what is meant by a Wycliffe Bible, and are for the most part confined to the books of the New Testament. Even when, a century after Wycliffe's death, Caxton opened his printing office, at the sign of the reed pale in Westminster, he would not have dared to print the book, and indeed it was not ever printed until the great Clarendon Press edition was given to the world in 1850. A real Wycliffe Bible is a hand transcribed volume of a kind evidently not intended for the governing classes, yet one which would have cost a purchaser some $150 in the money of today, but it has been owned by men who placed their love of truth before their love of life, so that Foxe declares one would give a load of hay for a loan of a volume but for an hour a day. Strictly speaking there are two versions of it, and which of these has just been sold in London there is nothing to show. The first is the original edition, translated by Wycliffe and Hereford, and issued about 1382, of which some thirty copies remain; and the second the revision by Purvey, transcribed during the first half of the fifteenth century, of which some 140 copies are still in existence. Little enough of its phraseology remains in the versions of today, but it went out in those dark medieval days to do something human power was unable to prevent, to show, or in the quaint archaic English of Wycliffe's own translation of the seventy-seventh verse of the Gospel of Luke, "to zeue science and helthe to his puple; in to remyssioun of hir synnes.'

THE COURSE which Seattle is pursuing in arranging a cordial reception for the Japanese business men who are coming to this country next fall on a tour of observation is calculated to strengthen further the ties of friendship between the two nations.

It will appeal with all the more significance and force to the visitors and to their government because of the fact that Seattle an important Pacific coast city, and because the attitude of her leading citizens toward this delegation from Japan, therefore, must be regarded as indicative of the general disposition of the thinking people of that section of the country in

The committee which Seattle has sent to the East with a view to the making of the arrangements referred to consists of two gentlemen, Messrs. E. F. Blaine and J. D. Lowman, representatives of the chamber of commerce of that city. These gentlemen were included in the American delegation of business men which visited Japan last autumn, and which was entertained by the five chambers of commerce of the leading cities of the empire in the most courteous and hospitable manner.

The plan as it is arranged at present contemplates the entertainment of the visitors for a considerable time at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, after which they will be invited to Portland, Tacoma, Spokane and other cities of the Pacific Northwest. Later they will visit the leading cities of the Middle West and of the Atlan-

The present efforts of the Seattle representatives are directed toward interesting the United States government and the great railway companies in the entertainment of these subjects of the Mikado, and it is gratifying to learn that their worthy purpose has met everywhere with sympathetic responses.

The fact seems to be fully recognized that Seattle has entered upon the performance of a task the success of which will go very far toward removing whatever remnant of resentment may exist in Japan toward any part of the United States.

THERE seems to be a good deal of pride, up Gloucester way, over first mackerel caught. The only one who isn't enthusiastic is the mackerel.

This Is More Than a Local Question

Consequences far more serious than any that could have been foreseen by Mr. Harriman are likely to result from his recent reply to Chicago's demand for the suppression of the smoke nuisance on the Illinois Central, when he said that if the municipality would meet half the cost of the undertaking the terminal of the line would be electrified. This was accepted by Chicago as a virtual refusal on Mr. Harriman's part to abide by the promises previously made by the stockholders and directors of the Illinois Central, that the work of electrification would proceed as quickly as possible, or as soon as the company could ascertain necessary facts having a bearing on such an important matter as that of changing the motive power within the city limits from steam to electricity; and a bill was at once introduced in the Legislature to enable the municipality to enforce its demand.

Now the president of the road, Mr. Harahan, comes forward with the statement that the road is making an honest effort to electrify its terminal tracks, and that the attempt to get the bill alluded to passed is ill-advised and unfair.

The point of greatest moment is that the passage of that bill through the Legislature would be one of the very worst things that could happen to the Illinois Central railroad. There is no question but that the city can be empowered to force electrification. If Chicago can compel electrification, other cities and towns in the state could not be denied a similar right. If all the cities and towns served by the Illinois Central should undertake to assert this right, Mr. Harriman might well dwell upon the dangers of bankruptcy.

Moreover, the consequences are likely to extend beyond the borders of Illinois, and to involve other railroads. What can be done in Illinois can be done in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, and in all of the other states.

There is, of course, a way out of this difficulty. No rightthinking person anywhere would wish to have the railroads unnecessarily burdened or embarrassed by a general demand for electrification. Mr. Harriman, whose too hasty reply has caused the trouble, has it in his power to quiet it. He will be wise if he will come to amicable terms with Chicago. Railroad managers everywhere will be wise if they do not drive the great cities to the extreme course threatened by that community.

THE UNIVERSALITY of the language of art in painting, in sculpture, architecture and music is not to be doubted. Through art, all peoples are brought to understand each other. Through art, the ancients have recorded their hopes, achievements and aspirations, and the most sublime expression of primitive art are the pyramids that stand today in grand simplicity, telling man the modern of man the ancient, cementing a bond of understanding that no lesser form of expression could have done and that a complex method would have rendered obscure. Those who have successfully wrought for their own times and for posterity have been men of deep thought, men who have observed, sympathized with and understood their fellows.

Such a man is Joaquin Sorolla y Bastida, the Spanish artist whose works have been exhibited this season in New York and Buffalo and are now on view in Boston. Sorolla was born of humble parents in Valencia; was an orphan at the age of two, worked with his uncle as a locksmith and at fifteen attended the Academia de Bellas Artes of San Carlos in Valencia. His artistic trend was pronounced, and from the humble locksmith lad there blossomed forth a sturdy Sorolla has mastered his craft and is unhampered by methods. A study of his works now on view in this city reveals the simple heart of a man who loves the wholesome life of the great outdoors. He loves children and their innocent sports, sunlight and space, atmosphere and breadth of view. In depicting the everyday life of his home and his times, Sorolla is speaking to mankind. His works will endure because they are full of the life that all can understand.

Artists, critics and laymen all flock to admire the great sweeps of color, the splendid draughtsmanship and masterly force which this man exhibits. There is not an intimation of conceit or of aught but achievement, of having performed the chosen task with ability and enthusiasm. To view the works of this artist is to breathe deeper of the simple life, and to forget strife, war, contentions and discord.

ONE OF the troubles about naming a piazza in Italy after Colonel Roosevelt is that it might create a confused impression. The average man would not know whether it was intended to honor his coming or his going.

The Lesson Patriots' Day

MASSACHUSETTS, the most prominent of the New England states, has just celebrated Patriots' Day, yet how many of those who observed the day paused to remember that the real lesson of Lexington and Concord is a metaphysical one. The youth of the country will not be inflamed to martial deeds, their animosities and passions will not be played upon, they will not be incited to acts of resentment or hostility, when the true spirit that inspired those simple-hearted farmers of Lexington Common is made plain to them. There was no lust for blood, no malignant hate, animating the first heroes of the revolution. They were essentially lovers of peace.

Go out to Lexington, stand before the rock marking the line of the Minute Men, and read what Capt. Parker said to his men, if you would catch the meaning of that day and understand the true nobility and Christianity of the American defence. Christlike forbearance characterizes that famous utterance; "Don't fire, unless fired upon. But if they mean to have a war, let it begin here."

Those "embattled farmers" were fighting for a principle, their cause was righteous, and therefore they won. The colonists for the most part were not trained soldiers, they had spent their years in peaceful pursuits, and at the beginning of the war of the Revolution they had none of the advantages which lay with the British army. And yet they won, and therein lies the metaphysical lesson which ought to be emphasized to our young men and women. Power resides not in numbers, or training, or any other of the elements cultivated by mortal man. Power is Good, never evil; Power is Truth, never error, and a cause that is right, be it individual or collective, can always be depended on to attain ultimate victory. The Founder of Christianity knew this when he said: "Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and He shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?"

Working Toward Efficiency in Wireless Telegraphy

THREE systems of long-distance wireless telegraphy are at the present time in close competition for that wider and more practical success which must be achieved before the invention can rightfully lay claim to commercial recognition. These are the Marconi, the Poulsen and the Fessenden. Marconi's system is working between Clifden, Ire., and Cape Breton, N. S., a distance of 2000 miles, but not with unvarying results. It is believed that with the employment of the same power he could exchange messages between the Cornwall and Cape Cod stations. Poulsen's station is at Cullercoates, on the Northumberland coast, and recently some very successful work was performed by his apparatus. In the presence of two professors, who have since testified to the success of the experiments in the London Times, messages were exchanged with the Poulsen station in Denmark, despatches being sent both by hand and by machine. It was to Fessenden that the United States government recently awarded the contract for a long range station for the navy department. He is working toward transatlantic communication also.

The respective systems show marked improvement over the earlier operation of the apparatus. There is no question that progress is being made by each of these inventors. But none of the systems can yet accept business with any assurance of being able to handle it with the reliability which the commercial world demands. It is to this end that the three leading inventors and many minor ones in this inviting and infatuating field are striving.

That the requisite efficiency in wireless telegraphy will be attained there can be no question. Every hour brings us closer to it.
